

CLASS 5 | FOOD FOR THOUGHTS

Worksheets

- TBH Brain-Healthy Foods List. This worksheet lists foods that are part of a brain-healthy diet. Use this worksheet to foster class discussion about brain-healthy eating. You can also use this list as a resource for choosing brain-healthy foods to bring to class for your participants to try, and as a class handout.
- TBH Recipe Challenge Game. This game offers class participants the chance to practice putting together a brain-healthy recipe.

Directions:

- Print out and assemble copies of the TBH Recipe Challenge Game. The game is designed to print in color. You should have enough copies for your class to play in groups of two or three persons per group.
- Distribute copies of the game, along with recipe or index cards (enough for each group to have at least 2-3 cards) and pencils or pens.
- Have each group work together to “build” brain-healthy recipes by combining ingredients using the TBH Recipe Challenge Game Cards. The recipes can be for snacks, appetizers, main courses, side dishes, salads or desserts.
- Next, have the group write down their “Brain-Healthy Recipe” on the index card.
- Have each group play for as long as time allows.
- At the end of the game, have each group present to the class their favorite recipe. If you would like, the class can vote and choose a “best” recipe. You can award the winning group with appropriate prizes such as brain-healthy ingredients, a package of recipe cards, etc.

Resources

Choose My Plate. This USDA website offers handouts, materials and other educational tools promoting healthy eating in a manner that follows their current guidelines.

<http://www.choosemyplate.gov/>

Center for Science in the Public Interest. This non-profit organization is a well-regarded, reliable source of information on nutrition and food. <http://www.cspinet.org/>